On October 25, the committee discussed the budget in detail with Van der Pluijm en Van den Eng.

On August 28, the Faculty Council approved the outlines of the Budget FWN 2024-2028 including the budget for the Quality Agreement funds. However, as instructed by the Executive Board an adjusted budget was formulated and submitted on October 16.

Van der Pluijm clarifies that for the coming years a deficit is expected. As instructed by the Executive Board to uphold the 5% reserve, the Faculty Board has decreased that deficit in the final budget in order to work towards upholding the reserve. The reserve is calculated by 5% of the faculty’s turnover, which is the norm at Leiden University. Due to the expected nationwide economic hardships, in part caused by several disrupting events across the globe, cuts by the government in budgets for universities are expected in the near future. Therefore, the reserve should preferably be upheld at 5% to provide a buffer for expected difficulties in the future.

The budget has been discussed with the institutes while looking for possible cuts. For example, open vacancies will not be fulfilled immediately which contributes to a more positive outcome of the budget.
With the final budget it is clear that some institutes will not be able to uphold the reserve completely at 5%. Even though the Executive Board has for now accepted the final budget, the faculty is instructed to look for other possibilities to increase the reserve. The Executive Board however has allowed the faculty more time to work this out in more detail.

Questions from the council:

“That is why a technical improvement in results has been chosen for the multi-year budget from 2025 onwards.” – page 2 attachment 285-23 revised budget FWN 2024-2028. What does this mean?

A better result is expected without a detailed plan to back this up. Meaning an overall improvement was processed in the final budget, but without detailed plans or underlying policies for improvements within the institutes.

What is the policy for allocating starter and incentive grants?

For the coming two years, two starter grants per institute can be allocated. The allocation of the incentive grants is based on the AEG-model. In practice, this means one grant for the smaller institutes and two for the larger ones during 2023-2024. The current faculty policy and internal distribution will be evaluated in 2024. The policy on how to distribute the grants has been discussed with the scientific directors and was agreed upon to be fair.

Due to the revision of recognition and rewards, as part of the Strategic Plan, possibly personnel costs will rise when staff is promoted more quickly in comparison than in the current situation. Is this taken in account within the budget?

Limiting the number of promotions is not for a goal in itself, however, one of the future key questions will be whether it is desirable that all academic staff members are able to promote to the highest levels. This topic will be discussed as part of the upcoming faculty programme for recognition and rewards.

Maaike Barkema, Strategic Secretary, presents how the process of formulating the agenda is planned and how the execution of the chosen programmes will be organized. The presentation will be sent to the council afterwards.

Questions and remarks from the council:

The council emphasizes their wish to be closely involved in the implementation and planning of the various projects from the Strategic Plan. Barkema and the FB ensure that the council will be informed regularly and that their input is welcome.

It depends on the kind of topic how and when the council will be involved and if it will only be informed, or if the council will be asked for advice or for its approval. The FB foresees a lot of consultation sessions being carefully planned with a lot of groups, the council included. This will be mapped out per program. Probably about three topics will be handled per year.

How are the project groups organized and who will participate?
At the last conference names were asked for participation. The groups will be broadly composed with members of different disciplines.

The process of the projects will be organized similar to how the projects of the Strategic Plan and the management model were executed. This approach of using dedicated project groups, not too big, but from the whole faculty, have functioned very well so far.

The whole framework is presented for the next year, how were the topics chosen for this year?

The FB has chosen the first topics based on urgency, and based on the input from the strategy consultations last March.

Thanks to Barkema.

The minutes have been approved by the former councilmembers of 2022-2023.

Action points:

- 20220530-4

  The evaluation is completed and will be sent to the council.
  Addition: the evaluation was sent to the council on November 13.

  The deadline is moved to the next meeting on December 4.

Questions about the minutes:

Lines 27 – 31

What is the status on the discussion about workplaces with the institutes and how will flexible workplaces be implemented?

The institutes know how much work and (lab)space is available in the new building. It is not a given that every staff member can have their own workplace. Rules and regulation norms must be followed, but it is the institute’s responsibility how to arrange and divide the workplaces. They are advised to discuss flexible working with their staff before moving into the building. However, this is not a new topic as this has been discussed for the past few years.

Line 54

“It remains to be seen whether the many international students who have registered for this will actually participate in the course”. Are there updates on this?

The FB is under the impression that the size of intake is manageable. Although the number of people filling in the application forms is larger than last year, expectations are that there will be sufficient class rooms available to facilitate the number of applicants. However, it is of course difficult to predict how this will develop in the future. If needed, a numerus fixus could be considered.

7. Questions, comments and open forum on behalf of the Faculty Council

What is the status of the CSC PhD students and their top up as their scholarship, provided by their country of origin, remains below the required threshold?

This issue started before summer. The IND set the income threshold too high, which led to the possibility of PhD students losing their permit for residing in the Netherlands. The Executive Board decided to provide a temporarily top up, which is paid for by the institutes. It is not clear yet if the top up will continue next academic year; however, foreign PhD students can currently still register.
